LITTLE THINGS That "trifles make the sum of human things" is as true in philately as in anything else.

It is the little things that count, Dickens' young person to the contrary notwithstanding. If you hope to be a successful philatelist—I did not say stamp collector, for there is a distinction and a very great difference—you must be observant of trifles. In these days of artful tricks and counterfeits made by photographic processes, the line of demarcation between the genuine and the false is very delicate. The visible difference may be merely that an angle is more or less acute, a curve more or less rounded, a slight variation in the thickness or grain of the paper, or a trifling difference in color. On these small things depends the worth or worthlessness of the stamp. Is it not better that the collector should be able to distinguish these things for himself, (if not always, at least sometimes) rather than to be dependent on the professional expert? When he can do this he has the satisfaction of knowing something, and being able to prove it to himself and others. And he attains a feeling of independence and self-confidence that are worth trying for. But this position cannot be reached without study and effort. There is no royal road to philatelic leadership.

Eternal vigilance is the price of safety, and unceasing effort is the price of success. You must study and think and observe constantly, and the things to which you must direct your attention are often minute and apparently unimportant. The day of the hit-or-miss counterfeit has gone by. The crude imitations which were common years ago are no longer fabricated. The forgers have realized that to make and offer such inferior products is a waste of time and effort. Today they seek for profits, and large ones at that, and their creations often exhibit a high degree of skill and require careful examination before their fraudulent character can be detected. In such cases we usually have to depend on minute variations from the genuine stamps and, in order that we may make such examinations with certainty, we must be familiar with the stamps, especially with their smaller details. For these reasons the careful collector and dealer and, most of all, the expert, must study their stamps carefully. Therefore, any knowledge of small points, minute marks and similar details is of value to them.

In years gone by we often heard slighting remarks about hair-line and pin-point philately, but today we have begun to realize the value of such seeming trifles, and writings about them are more respected. During the past year or two numerous hand books, large and small, have been published. A noticeable feature of many of them has been the attention paid to dots and small marks, intentional and accidental, which are to be found on the stamps described. Many of these marks have a bearing on the methods employed in making the plates, and indicate to the careful observer the nature of those methods and the intention of the marks. Other marks, which are apparently accidental though permanent, are of use to the student as guides to printings from certain plates. For example, such dots and marks have been very carefully described by Mr. B. W. H. Poole in his hand book on the Falkland Islands stamps, and it is demonstrated that these marks had a purpose and their presence or absence should indicate certain things to us.

We have recently seen in various philatelic journals very careful descriptions of the stamps composing the sheets of the current issue of Papua. The variations described are, many of them, very slight, and it might seem to the average collector that time and effort have been wasted in searching out and describing them. Yet we cannot tell when these descriptions may prove of value. A few years hence, when the sheets have been broken up, two stamps might be compared and, because they differed, one of them might be condemned a counterfeit. But, having the descriptions of the variations in the sheet, we would be able to prove both of them to be genuine. Mr. H. E. Deats has been collecting these stamps for years with a view to restoring the sheet. He has kindly placed his material in my hands and I have accomplished the restoration with the exception of four stamps, which have not yet been identified. Some of the varieties in this sheet are very prominent and distinct while others are very slight, yet we cannot tell at what time they may prove of use in detecting some clever fraud. On the same lines I have studied the early Transvaal stamps, and by this means have been able to identify certain varieties as coming from plates which have not heretofore been recognized.

These varieties have long puzzled the specialists, and I believe they and all collectors will welcome light on this subject. The stamps of the first issue of Samoa have been a bug-bear to collectors for many years because of the great quantity of reprints in existence. There are no general features of design, paper or perforation by which we may distinguish between the originals and the reprints, so we must turn to the minor features to help us separate the two classes. We find that each stamp has its individual marks. Collectors have studied them and restored the plates so that we are now able to separate the good from the undesirable stamps.

This sort of work is worth undertaking and worth doing well. There is plenty of it yet to be done. There are many neglected countries that would repay study, and even issues of the popular countries that might reveal much to the careful investigator. When you are working on any subject do not fail to watch out for the little things.

A FLYING VISIT BEHIND THE SCENES In a little more than a year hence the American Philatelic Society will have encompassed the twenty-fifth year of its existence, it having been organized September 14, 1886.

Some few local societies of the philatelic world have attained an age equaling or approaching these years, but it is thought that it remains for the American society to represent an entire nation with an unbroken record of consecutive activity for twenty-three and a half years, as is the case with A. P. S. to date. This is the more creditable when, not counting its general foreign membership, the size of the nation it stands for is considered and the fact that its membership is, and always has been, scattered

“From Atlantic’s rugged coast
To Pacific’s golden gate,
And from Southland’s gulf
To shining northern lake.”
Hence, for the Society to have honorably lived through this period of time—and it is our proud boast that we can truthfully say its career has at all times been an honorable one—to have thus honorably lived and grown in stability and influence argues many things; but above them all this one interesting fact. The Society must have been at all times, and must be at the present time, of value to philately and to philatelists. Probably it may be further truthfully said that the Society has not only kept pace with, but has been a factor in the development of philately in the United States; the two being dependent each on the other.

This last notwithstanding apparent slowness at times to achieve heights earnestly sought by its well wishers and workers in its interest. At the same time, it may be questioned whether there are just grounds for this latter thought, for in the aggregate the years that have passed have been formative years. Years that have developed the Society on such a sound basis that, while it may yet experience a further period of progressive rounding out, its stability for all time is more than assured.

In view of all this, the thought naturally arises, what is doing today to maintain, or raise to a higher standard, the aims of the Society?

In reply it may be stated that our esteemed organization has been quietly but persistently moving along on lines of earnest work since the Atlantic City convention, which statement may be verified and appreciated by a flying visit behind the scenes during these, our working hours between conventions. Time will not admit looking over ground fairly familiar to the membership; such as the work of the Vice Presidents, the Secretary, the Treasurer and the Sales Superintendent. They are all heard from, through their quarterly, monthly or weekly reports in the official journal. But it may be added that of necessity these reports can never convey an idea of the voluminous correspondence and detail work required of these officers.

Neither will time admit of detail inspection of many other parts of the machinery by which A. P. S. is kept in motion. But in passing it may be noted that the Presidential cog has to date two file boxes full of correspondence to account for its bearings not having become gummed up from inactivity; also that the gears representing the Board of Directors have accumulated no rust from being idle. In fact, the record of their revolutions show a total of twenty-three mail votes having been taken by the Board of Directors on various matters pertaining to their office, among which may be found the following: Mail vote on organization, the election of officers and elective committees, awarding the contract for printing the Quarterly, approval of bonds, the granting of charters to branch societies, fixing the date of the next convention, appropriating the sum of $150.00 for the use of the Recruiting Committee, expulsion of members, accepting a proposed donation of books for the Society's library, putting the publication of the so-called U. S. Catalogue on an official basis in the matter of finance, and authorizing the name of the Society to be placed on the list of the "Committee of Honor of the International Philatelic Exposition at Berne.

But, as the regular machinery of the Society is supposed to be at all times in working order, the greatest interest in the visit will probably be centered on certain of its attachments, as typified by special committees and otherwise.

Of the new committees, that on the Catalogue of the United States Postage Stamps will probably excite the first inquiry on account of the interest taken in bringing about its creation and the natural desire to know what, if anything, it has accomplished. Hence the members will be pleased to learn that after the Atlantic City convention it began systematic operation as early as September 14th, 1909, and that after a period of an exchange of views by correspondence a meeting of the committee was held in New York City on October 21st, at which eight of its nine members were represented, six in person and two by proxy. At that meeting it was decided that the plan of publishing an exhaustive reference list of the postage stamps of the United States, under the auspices of the American Philatelic Society, was feasible; and, having full power to act in all matters pertaining to the same except involving the Society in any expense without the sanction of the Board of Directors, the committee agreed to the following: That a catalogue be published, to be called "A Reference List of the Adhesive Postage Stamps of the United States," to include in scope postmaster's stamps, general issues, officials, postage dues, newspaper, special delivery and carrier stamps — in other words, Scott Nos. 1 to 125, except the post office seals. The manuscript for the work to be supplied by Messrs. J. M. Bartels and Charles K. B. Nevin, except the portion pertaining to the postmaster's and carrier stamps, manuscript for which will be furnished by a third gentleman who modestly requests that his name be not published with the others, owing to what he considers his small part in the work. The "List," when finally published, to be in general style the same as the hand book on the U. S. 3c 1851; but the work to be first published, in parts, in the American Philatelist (Quarterly) without prices, to be followed in the book form with prices. The committee further provided for financing the publication of the book when the time for its issuance shall have arrived, and the Board of Directors have, by vote, placed the book on an official footing in connection with the financing. It is estimated that the subject matter of this Reference List will consist of as much as the Quarterly will care to print for at least six issues, and that it will take about the time thus represented to prepare the manuscript. In the meantime work has been in progress on the latter for some months, with the end in view of beginning its publication in some one of the Quarterlies before the next convention.

Another committee, the one now known as the Educational Committee, will attract attention for some of its spectacular features. Inasmuch, however, as its work has been very generally exploited in the philatelic press, and in view of the fact of a detail report concerning it in the Society's Official Journal, the following only need be noted about it in this connection. It is the old "Publicity Committee" under a new plan of operation. Out of the latter has developed an exceedingly comprehensive campaign, in which are included old features and new, which may be thus briefly enumerated. The Burroughs syndicate articles are being continued and packets of stamps are being furnished for distribution through the "American Boy," of Detroit. In addition, an entirely different, broader and strictly educational distribution of stamps is in operation, handled exclusively by the committee in the name of the Society. This distribution is in the form of folders, on which are mounted a few well selected stamps of a given country. The folders contain facts about each of the stamps, a description of the country they represent, and some general matter about stamp collecting, the latter appealing to both the children and the "grown ups." These folders are advertised in youth's papers and sent out in response to inquiries; provision being made in the scheme for application for folders on other countries. That the effort is bearing fruit is demonstrated by the large number of requests that have been made for the first, or Philippine set, a large majority of which included an application for the following set on Australia. As the work is supported by voluntary subscriptions of the members, all it needs to accomplish a record year of usefulness is sufficient donations to carry it on.

There are other committees, to note whose progress in this our flying visit behind the scenes would prove most gratifying to the visitor. But time requires that the visit be brought to a close for this occasion by a casual glance only at a few more features of interest; although it should be borne in mind that there will still be remaining others that are worthy of notice.

The results of the Recruiting Committee's efforts are shown from time to time in the Official Journal, but there is one feature about it worthy of particular note. That is the result of the plan adopted for the present year of safeguarding the character of our membership by the aid of local committeemen. This result is reflected by the statement, in the last published report of the Vice Presidents, that for the quarter "no objection has been received to the admission of any applicant for membership."

That the Hand Book Committee is not idle is abundantly evidenced by its repeated public calls for manuscript; and of the Philatelic Index Committee it can be noted that real, tangible progress is in evidence along the line of its endeavor. In fact, the general plan and scope of the work on this index, as now being actually developed, is of such interest as to possibly make another little visit behind the scenes worth while at some time in the near future.

Finally, as to the Quarterly itself. This, its second number, with work actually begun on the third, is evidence of good faith and a reasonable guarantee that it is the intent to give the membership its four numbers by the end of the year.

AMERICAN EXPANSION AND PHILATELY

By Fred J. Melville,

President, Junior Philatelic Society, London.

The English have been described as a nation of shop-keepers. The United States is (so far as one can judge at a distance) a nation of hard-headed business men. That stamp collecting should be coming in for a wave of great prosperity amongst so eminently practical a people as the American nation, may be taken as no insignificant evidence of its prospects of permanence as a pursuit and of its security as an investment.

As the "American Philatelist" in its quarterly form is, we presume, not only to form a medium of inter-communication between philatelists of already secured standing, but also to extend the knowledge of our cult among the uninitiated, it may be pardoned by the older collectors if we enter upon some phases of philatelic discussion which have had an airing on many occasions, but on which each successive generation of philatelists must be, more or less, nourished.

The sale within a few months of each other of two great collections of postage stamps, one formed in England and the other in America, for huge cash amounts, must have come as a surprise to the non-philatelist. The transactions in question have also an important moral for the collector, viz., that the business side of stamp collecting is not a one-sided affair all in the favor of the dealer. Both the collections of the late Sir William Avery, Bart., of England, and of the late Mr. Paul, of Philadelphia, were sold to stamp dealers, in each case to the particular dealers who probably had supplied the major portion of the stamps contained in the collections. This is a point of importance, and we will consider it hereafter.

The non-collectors would—many of them for the first time—learn that there is a vast capital invested in the stamp trade, and the shrewd business man would need no assurance that the money was not tied up in postage stamps for the benefit of the investor's health.

There is, we believe, still an impression in many quarters that postage stamps for collections are almost exclusively left to "the Eton stripling." It must, however, be at once conceded that it is not the schoolboy who makes big prices for individual rare stamps.

A stamp collection on a comprehensive and advanced plan is the privilege of the wealthy. By judicious limitation of the scope of a collection, however, the moderately well-off man may excel in one or two branches of philatelic research. And so we can all adapt our hobby to our means.

We find collectors in all ranks of society, from the heir to the British throne to the humblest of his future subjects. The Monarchs, Princes and Merchant Princes of many lands shed the lustre of their exalted positions on the collecting of stamps.

His Majesty, King Edward, graciously recognized the scientific aspect of collecting by granting to the premier Society of Philatelists in Great Britain the permission to use the prefix "Royal," and an examination of the register of the now Royal Philatelic Society gives us an idea of the popularity of stamp collecting among the wealthy. The past and present Presidents and Vice Presidents and the fellows of this Society represent all grades of social distinction. The late Sir Daniel Cooper, Bt., F. R. G. S., was the first President elected so long ago as 1869; other Presidents have been:

His Honour Judge Philbrick, K. C. (1878).

H. R. H. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, K. G., elected when Duke of Edinburgh (1890), and the Earl of Kingston (1892).

The present holder of the Presidency is H. R. H. The Prince of Wales, K. G. He was elected on May 29th, 1896, when Duke of York.

The Earl of Crawford, K. T., Vice-president of the Society, is one of the most advanced students of philatelic matters, and his library on the subject is of great extent, and a big volume containing a catalogue of the works in it is now being printed at the Aberdeen University press.

Prince Doria Pamphilj, of Italy, is a Fellow of the Royal Philatelic Society also.

Among eminent merchants and men of business Mr. H. J. Duveen, of the great firm of Art Dealers, owns one of the finest collections of old stamps in perfect condition.

Mr. Henry J. Crocker, director of half a dozen banks in San Francisco, lost a number of his precious collections in the fire that followed the earthquake of 1906, but he still possesses collections which are of the first importance.

The late millionaire banker M. Paul Mirabaud left collections which realized a total of over £30,000, his Swiss stamps alone fetching £8,000, another collection bringing £4,000, the balance being sold by auction in Paris, extending over a period of nearly three weeks, during the whole of which time the bidding was exceptionally keen.

Philipp La Renotiere, one of the world's richest nobles, is believed to have spent close upon a quarter of a million on his, the first collection in the world. This collection is said to be bequeathed to the Musee Galliera, and will never come on the market.

One could multiply these instances of wealthy collectors both in America and Europe did space permit. I would, however, endeavor to show how stamps are in every sense gilt edged securities.

The journal of the Royal Philatelic Society recently stated "we doubt if there is any object in bric-a-brac collecting, that is such collectors Consols as really scarce postage stamps."

We have known collectors call a halt, and ask, would the dealers buy back their stamps say ten years hence, and if so would they give them little or nothing for them? As a matter of fact the really scarce stamps have been gradually absorbed in great collections during the process of years. The dealer has clients on his list who are clamouring for rarities which are only to be had by the acquisition by purchase of big collections.

The dealer must buy back to keep his business going; the demand for rare stamps exceeds all the possibilities of supply.

One of the factors in the popularity of stamp collecting is the portability of the postage stamp and the fact that it lends itself to convenient and simple arrangement, a factor which is present in no other form of bric-a-brac collecting to the same degree.

Then there is a known value for practically every postage stamp. This value fluctuates from year to year, but the tendency is practically always in the upward direction.

Then it should be remembered that stamps are produced from Government dies, and it is only in very exceptional circumstances that such dies have ever been used to the disadvantage of the philatelic investor, and of course there is a high penalty for the illicit imitation of such dies.

In the case of medium and rare stamps, provided always they are perfect copies, they will, even at auction, fetch their known value and often exceed it.

The prices secured at the recent Mirabaud auction in Paris in a great many cases exceeded the catalogue quotations of the dealers. The stamps were in every case well selected specimens. The history of one or two well known collections may point out the possibilities of stamps as an investment. The first is a dealer's resume of a collector's purchases with which he was familiar.

1. Collection started 1892, purchases that year about £500, add interest at 5% £25, cost at end of year £525; then reckon that the owner spent £1,000 a year for the first six years, £2,000 a year for the next five years, and we make up the total to £16,500. He only had the collection between ten and eleven years, and adding 5% as above to the cost of capital spent at the end of each year, the collection cost about £21,650; if it was sold for the sum of £29,500, as stated, the owner received a profit of £7,850 plus 5% on his investments for eleven years.

2. Mr. Hughes-Hughes, a member of the Philatelic Society, expended only £69 on his yearly collection, which he sold in 1896 for £3,000.

We can even point out to the business man that examples of recent issues of stamps suddenly becoming scarce are also numerous. The 2/6 stamp of British New Guinea issued five years ago (1905) is today priced at 65/.

The Caymen Island 1/ stamp of 1901-2 now costs 12/6, while the emergency stamps of the same little British colony issued as lately as 1907 are almost unobtainable. There are many more, but we must now proceed to the more definite purpose of these notes, which is an endeavour to find some of the most promising outlets for the American investor in postage stamps.

The American business man who attains a high degree of success generally does so by reason of foresight, in addition always to application. The successful investor in stamps is he who can see a long way ahead. Our purpose in these notes is not so much to point out "sure snaps" as to indicate some general lines on which the rises in philatelic investments of the past have run, and at the same time to apply within our limitations the lessons of the past to the stamps of those states or dependencies which we may hereafter indicate as possible popular countries of the future, more especially from the point of view of the American investor.

The postage stamps of the world are curiously interwoven both with national and international politics, and collecting has been necessarily influenced by these affairs. The growth of imperialism in Great Britain led, (with other considerations which were, however, probably brought about by the new spirit) to the immense popularity and consequent rise in the prices of the postage stamps of the British dominions. This group, however, has attained so great proportions that even within its bounds we may seek and find causes why some colonies are more popular than others with serious collectors. Here the political influence is strong. The coming of a United South Africa is looked forward to as a probable occasion for the terminating of a number of series of stamps, all of which may be superseded by a united issue for all the states in the federation. A similar federation is looked for to rehabilitate the fortunes of Australian philately. But the political influence is stronger in the lesser countries. Toward the end of the last century there was a great shuffling of cards in the Pacific, accompanied by a scurry of the Powers to secure, while yet any remained, the islands of the Pacific to themselves as coaling stations, strategic points and for commercial purposes. So these islands produced stamps which were born amid a flourish of trumpets, and the popularity of their progeny was secured from birth. This popularity may safely be maintained so long as their progeny does not become an over-prolific litter.

Some of the British dependencies have suffered a philatelic decline. The islands of the West Indies form a notable example. But the decline has been largely due to the economic failure of all the islands except Jamaica, which is flourishing commercially and its stamps are flourishing philatelically.

We have briefly referred to the political influence, more especially the imperial. But there is another important factor which has been notable in Great Britain. It is propinquity. Our nearness to the states of Europe has had its share and effect on bringing European stamps into the position they at present hold in the stamp market.

Another prominent influence is patriotism, which is naturally most effective in its results on the stamp market during periods of great national prosperity.

(To be concluded)

In the second, and final installment of this article Mr. Melville will most interestingly show how, under the territorial expansion of the United States, the American collector has opportunities for working out a philatelic future independent of certain past conditions.—Editor.

TERMS

Over fifteen hundred bidders know my “selling to” terms, but comparatively few of them know my “selling for” terms. I have two scales of terms, depending on whether you or I make up the lots. They are:

20% commission when I do all the work of cataloguing and dividing into lots.

10% commission (minimum charge 35c per lot) when you mount the lots on slips which I furnish free for that purpose.

My Catalogues are written with the utmost care for the interests of both buyer and seller; my mailing list contains over 2,500 selected names; the sale is conducted by a state-licensed auctioneer; in short, everything is done that can be done to make success certain.

WE WISH TO CALL YOUR ATTENTION

To the several important improvements recently made in REDFIELD'S STAMP WEEKLY.

First: All reading matter is now set in 8 pt. type instead of 11 pt. as formerly.

Second: A much higher quality of paper is now being used.

Third: A New Issue department has been added.

We invite comparison between our paper and other weekly stamp publications.

We are putting out a first class paper and merit the support of all A. P. S. members.

Auctions=Buy or Sell

We can give you the best of service in either instance. Did it ever occur to you that buying stamps in auction sales is the real and only way to buy your stamps. All live and up-to-date collectors are using this method; and we find that this is the best way a collector can get the finest stamps at his own price and be satisfied. We hold auctions as frequently as twice a month, with many good desirable stamps that the average collector is looking for. Every collector who does not receive our catalogue should drop us a postal at once.

NET BOOKS

For those who do not buy at auction we have made up a fine lot of stamps which average from 60%, 66⅔%, and 75% from catalogue. These books contain some fine bargains.
